									Crate for nap time/down time with Kong or chewy (both in my view and out of my view)
									Desensitize to Treat n Train (can use for crate in van too)
									Puppy chooses to go in crate = treats (lots of treats in crate, then a recall out of the crate for one treat. Wait for pup to go back in crate for several treats given one at a time.
									Gradually increase distance pup has to go to get in the crate and time in the crate between treats and recall cues.
									Take the crate to many different locations and play crate games
									Close and open door while treats are delivered thru top of crate
									Drop treats outside the crate with door open- treat choice to stay inside
									Move around outside crate with door open- treat choice to stay inside
									Occasionally release out of crate for one treat and send to crate for lots Consider crate exit behavior at crowded trials with crates side by side
									Release from and send to crate – passing by and over distractions
									Open door, put leash on, close door and treat thru top
									Leash is on, open door and reward staying in crate
									Practice door open/close with leash on
									Call out- praise only, stand still. Dog chooses to go back in crate- reward
									Call out to collar grab/reward, restrain/rev em up and then send to crate
									Gradually reduce RoR for being in crate so dog learns to stay w/o treats
									Increase distance of call out/send (T&T on top)
									Try to entice dog out with toys without exit cue (T&T on top)
									Repeat in multiple locations (without treat n train)
									Work multiple dogs (one works while other is in crate with door open)
									Practice calling the dog you want to work
									Dog in crate- recall to exciting tug game – freeze and wait for dog to let go of toy and choose the crate. Down in crate restarts the game.

Can use a cardboard box or storage tote to make a big crate smaller and use a smaller box as the pup grows.
